SCHOOL REPORT.

FELLOW CITIZENS :

In compliance with the requirements of law, I beg leave to again present for your consideration the following report of your schools for the past year, together with some thoughts and suggestions, which have occurred to me while in the discharge of my official duties. In the selection of teachers the Prudential Committees have with but few exceptions, exercised very commendable discretion, thereby securing a class of teachers who have performed their duty to the acceptance of your committee, and to the profit of your children. The position of Prudential Committee is one of the greatest responsibility, and its duties if properly performed have the greatest influence in determining the character of your schools. It is not the duty of the Superintending Committee altogether to protect you from the imposition of incompetent teachers or mere pretenders. You should send none to him for his approval, with whose reputation and ability, you have not made yourselves fully acquainted. For illustration : Suppose that a teacher is engaged, and on the morning of commencement, presents himself or herself to the Committee, for his approval. If after due examination he is satisfied that the candidate is unsuitable for the position ; what then is to be done ? The path of duty is plain ; but on the other hand, arises the question of expediency. The school is ready to commence the scholars are at the school house and the district is in expectation. Shall the district be disappointed the school delayed and the teacher subjected to exposure and consequent ridicule. This is one of the most difficult questions I have been called upon to solve and is confirmed by the testimony of committees in general. In several instances during the year teachers have commenced school without my permission or knowledge, and the first intimation which I have received, has been a notice to visit the school. For the benefit of such, allow me to quote from the Report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for the year 1876: "There is a growing tendency manifested on the part of some candidates for teaching our schools, to avoid entirely if possible anything like a rigid or critical examination. They often come, if at all, when his engagements may be such as to render it impossible for him to attend to it, or at least to preclude all possibility of a careful examination. In this event the committee must either attempt a hasty examination, without the possibility of being able to ascertain the real qualifications of the candidate or suffer the school to commence without the examination. In either case; it will be very difficult to withhold a certificate though he should be fully convinced of the incompetency of the teacher. It is calculated to give great offence and create division in the district. "To the teachers we say go to the committee and get a certificate. No matter if in your own opinion you are as "wise as Solomon" don't commence school until you have shown respect enough to those you are to look to for assistance to even present yourselves for examination."

Look well then to the selection of your teachers in the beginning. Having secured a good teacher your responsibility is by no means ended. You should visit your schools often, making yourselves thoroughly acquainted with everything pertaining to their management. This is not only a high privilege, a source of profit and interest to the school, but is it your most imperative duty. You should also give to your teacher, your cordial co-operation. Their task is too often rendered most difficult and unpleasant by a want of sympathy and encouragement on your part. Frequent visits to the school room, and occasional words of advice and good cheer, are the "green spots" in the experience of every teacher. See to it, that your children are not absent, only when it cannot possibly be avoided. Absences by the day, and half day, are broken links in the chain, and will paralyze the efforts of the best teachers. This is a serious evil, and although we cannot compel parents to keep their children constantly at school, yet they who permit or uphold truancy are worthy of public censure. Teachers, allow me thus publicly to thank you for your efforts in cultivating the moral and intellectual faculties of those committed to your charge. The occupation you have chosen, is one of no common merit or responsibility. It is in the language of another, "to train the youth of to-day for the men of to-morrow," to cultivate the minds and develop the faculties, that are to rule the nation in the future. Scholars : I have been highly gratified while visiting your schools from time to time to witness the efforts you have been putting forth to fit you for the responsible duties of after life. Many of you have plainly shown that you fully appreciate the high privileges which are bestowed upon you. It is one of the beautiful features of our political system that all can be educated alike, that here are no class distinctions ; and that the rich and the poor meet on a common level, and start on the journey of life with equal prospects and equal advantages. But the fact of schools and teachers can never make you wise. This can only be acquired by patient and persevering effort on your own part. He wins who will. There is no "royal road" to learning in these days of lightning and steam more than in the days of old.

Parents, teachers and scholars let me appeal to you all, to labor unitedly and earnestly that the youth of our country may be properly educated ; that they may become ornaments to society, that they may be established in virtue, morality and all things else which will perpetuate the blessings of Republican liberty. In conclusion allow me to call your attention to the imperative need of a change in the multitude of text books, which now afflict our schools. A single illustration will suffice. For Arithmetics we have in the different schools Greenleaf's National, Common School, Practical, and a large and growing family of Mentals and Intellectuals ; Robinson's, Adams', White's, Wentworth's and Colburn's. Grammar are in nearly the same condition ; and Geographies much worse. Text books need to be "weeded out" with merciless hands retaining only the best, and preparing the way for a definite system of classification. I desired to make changes during the past year, but refrained from doing so, until your attention could be called to its absolute necessity.

DISTRICT No. 1.—Arthur S. Ladd Prudential Committee. Summer term of nine weeks, taught by Miss Gertie E. Swain. This was her first school, and at the commencement manifested very commendable deportment on the part of the scholars, and thorough earnest work by the teacher, but having no notice of its close, I can report nothing further. During the fall I was notified that the school had been in session three weeks and on visiting it, found one Miss Marcia Tucker teaching without examination certificate, or other authority. Granted her permission to continue but did not receive notice of its closing until the afternoon of the last day, consequently could not visit or report anything in regard to the progress of the school.

DISTRICT No. 2.—Frank A. Randlett, Prudential Committee. Summer term taught by Miss Mattie A. Brawn. The summer term was a small school of small scholars, and consequently did not stand the test of an examination with so much credit to themselves as is the case with larger and more advanced scholars. The deportment of the scholars was very commendable at both examinations.

Fall term taught by Miss Susie E. Farrar. She manifested the same thoroughness and diligence as teacher which I had formerly observed in her as a scholar. Found in this school some of the best Reading which I have heard during the year. Clear and concise in all Arithmetical demonstrations.

DISTRICT No. 3.—A. P. B. Currier, Prudential Committee. Summer term of eight weeks taught by Miss Alice Estelle Freese with the best of success. Miss Freese has the best of literary qualifications for her work, is energetic and self-reliant and carried thoroughness into the minutest details.

Fall and winter term of eighteen weeks taught by Miss L. Jennie Currier who has had an extended experience in this district and has the qualifications necessary for a good teacher. She has the faculty of imparting her instruction in a manner easy to be understood and the general appearance of the school was highly commendable.

DISTRICT No. 4.—Hubbard Fifield, Prudential Committee. Summer term of six weeks taught by Miss Marion E. Lyford, who has taught nine months before in this district with good success. However good the teacher might have been six weeks is altogether too short a time for a school of eight small scholars to show any great improvement.

Fall term of six weeks taught by Miss M. Ella Berry. Had she possessed better literary qualifications it would have added much to the effectiveness of her instruction. Thorough logical analysis of elementary principles is inseparably connected with successful teaching.

Winter term commenced by Walter S. Peaslee, who after a short time resigned and the remainder of the term taught by Clarence H. Pearson, who labored under some disadvantage from finishing the work begun by another. He has superior literary qualifications and much energy and with experience I doubt not would rank high as a teacher.

DISTRICT No 5.—Thomas L. Fuller, Prudential Committee, Summer and fall terms eight weeks each, Miss Louise A. Eaton, teacher. This the largest and most difficult school in the town. Miss Eaton has had an extended experience in teaching, having taught eighty-four months previous to these terms, ten terms of which have been in this district: from which it would seem that further comment is unnecessary.

Winter term sixteen weeks, Walter S. Peaslee, teacher. This school has not been so productive of good results as is desirable: owing to a want of co-operation between the teacher, scholars, and the parents. I find no remissness on the part of the teacher except such as would inevitably ensue from the discouraging influences under which he has labored.

DISTRICT No 6.—Oliver L. Sanborn, Prudential Committee, Summer term of six weeks, Miss Frances M. Heath, teacher, who fully maintained her former reputation as a faithful and beloved teacher. Fall term of ten weeks, Miss Alida Quimby, teacher. At my first visit to this school, there were manifested unmistakable indications of coming storms, which culminated in open rebellion. The most distinguishing characteristics of some of these scholars are a total lack of interest in school duties; and the tendency to insubordination which inevitably accompanies the former. Miss Quimby desired to succeed but lacked somewhat in energy to deal with scholars of this kind.

DISTRICT No. 7.—Lowell Sanborn, Prudential Committee. Summer term of eight, and fall term of eleven weeks, taught by Miss Flora O. Bean. This was her first attempt at teaching and she met with the good success which comes only from thorough and persistent application. I notice a marked improvement in order and the general appearance of the school since last year.

DISTRICT No. 8.—Monroe H. Philbrick, Prudential Committee. Summer term of seven weeks and fall term of — weeks taught by Walter S. Peaslee. These were model schools and well worthy of the teacher and scholars who made them such. No school in the town has made so much improvement in order or so much progress in study during the last year and a half as No. 8.

DISTRICT No. 9.—Edwin Randlett, Prudential Committee. Summer term of eight weeks, taught by Miss Dora E. Lee. Fall term of ten weeks, taught by Miss Emma J. Lane. Both these teachers met with good success, and the closing examinations of both terms showed good progress in study and the best of order. At the closing examination of the fall term I found one of the best classes in primary grammar in the town.

DISTRICT No. 10.—Chas. W. Farrar, Prudential Committee. Summer term of six weeks, Miss Lizzie A. Britton, teacher. Miss Britton performed her duty well and endeavored to impress upon her scholars the imperative necessity of a thorough understanding of elementary principles. I have always found in this school the best of order.

Fall term of nine and one-half weeks, taught by Benson A. Leavitt. Mr. Leavitt had no previous experience in teaching, but seemed to have very correct ideas of his duty, and at the opening examination all things seemed to indicate a prosperous school. I was unable to visit at the close, consequently cannot report the amount of progress made.

DISTRICT No. 11.—Nicholas D. Garmon, Prudential Committee. Summer term of six weeks, and fall term of nine weeks, taught by Miss Frances M. Heath. Having taught her eighteenth term in this district to the acceptance of your Committee I hope that she may long continue to "go and do likewise."

DISTRICT No. 12.—Mrs. Hannah E. Badger, Prudential Committee. Winter term of ten weeks taught by Mrs. Badger. This is the smallest school in town numbering only four scholars yet nevertheless they are making very good progress.

Respectfully submitted,

SOLON F. HILL,

Superintending School Committee.
